THE REVOLUTION BEGAN on May 19. Our eyes were grown accustomed to seeing Instagram-ready airbrushed faux lashes, and lip gloss that dries like car paint, and it was for something softer, prettier, more human. That day, makeup artist Daniel Martin sent Meghan down the aisle with little more than a whisper of foundation, lip balm, igniting a global beauty debate that was trumped by the hoopla surrounding her dress. While some believe bridal makeup should be able to be seen from the last chair, this work as a seismic shift: If you're watching her enter the church (peeking through), she's changed. "It's about being," says Martin. "It's about being truly beautiful." Flawless Faux Lashes moisturize, that's more like it (essentially tinted balms). The signs are clear: women want makeup that doesn't look like makeup. They want to project an aura of vitality," says makeup artist Troy Surratt, founder of Surre Beauty. "Dehydrated, sun, flushed cheeks, rosy lips, and a nose that wells up (or marks on the face) cache as a designer handbag's new necessities. Think of the new hints at a lifestyle of wellness, workouts and Moon Juice smoothies, and you're ready.

Nature

Nature is a perfect way to recharge one's soul. Taking inspiration from nature gives a fresh perspective on design.

Fashion is an artwork in itself. Observing nature enables a designer to incorporate new elements into their designs. Attractive grassy color and texture can bring so much fun.

Expression of the concept of geometric pattern in the use of fashion design is not only a geometric pattern decoration, but also a symbolic language. Geometric pattern not only beautifies our life, but also transcends the language barriers, ethnic and geographical barriers.
